Psychology

The Psychology major offers students a program of study which consists of a major, an on-campus counseling clinic, and a functioning field experience program. The major is designed for students desiring to, 1) continue their education in graduate psychology and counseling programs; 2) pursue a variety of occupations, such as law or business, in which a broad psychology and social science background is helpful; and/or 3) enter a variety of ministry fields, including missions, church staff positions, and chaplaincy positions.
